

The

girl with the colored

teeth

By Molly Ellenberger

One fresh spring morning a girl named Ayla looked in the mirror to get ready for school. She knew something was unusual. So she checked her hair it was dark brown like it always was. She looked exactly like she did all the time. So she smiled and she had colored teeth. She brushed so hard she made her gums bleed.

"MOM" said Ayla "what" said mom I have colored teeth. Honey relax it will come off. Lets go said mom where, to the store and the mall to get your picture taken for Easter.
But my teeth, just get your Easter dress. In the mall they walked to the picture place with no noise.
When they got in the room to get their picture taken she smiled wide with not thinking of her teeth.

Then Ayla went home and said "I'm so excited to see the picture". Mom Look AT My Teeth! I forgot to not smile. Just cut me out of the pictures if you'r giving them away for Easter.

Then Ayla went and put on her heart pajamas.
And told her mom that she wishes her teeth will be normal in the morning.

In the morning Ayla, jumped out of bed. And ran to look at her teeth in the mirror. All of Ayla's teeth were white again.

Ayla ran to tell her mom the good news.

Ayla's mom said, your little brother Josh has something to tell you.

Josh told Ayla, I'm sorry I did that to your teeth. I tried out my new markers.

Never fall asleep with your mouth open when your brother
gets new markers.
